I regularly visit the Lilydale to Warburton rail trail including riding there from inner Melbourne. Currently the quarry area is the main barrier to riding all the way from the CBD to Warburton on an off-road path.

Therefore I would fully support a wide, attractive cycling and pedestrian path connecting to the rail trail and also to Lilydale town centre. If there are added attractions such as parks etc on the way, that would be a bonus. The new train station is also crucial - this increases flexibility for one-way cycling or walking trips, or to skip a section of the trail if children in the group are worn out. With the rail trail now extending to Yarra Glen and planned to loop around via Healesville, the final network would make a very attractive multi-day trip for both local and international tourists.

I confirm that I have read and agree to the above conditions for making a submission.
