Preston Market is a place of community significance that will be ever more important and appreciated as Melbourne grows and expands outwards. Preston Market remains a melting pot of cultures and ethnicities, a place for people to meet, and a place to buy cheap food from small businesses in a world that is increasingly separated, globalised and being overtaken by large corporations. Preston Market as it stands today is a community icon and part of what makes Melbourne's north authentic and special. Knocking the majority of it down is shortsighted and ill conceived.

I confirm that I have read and agree to the above conditions for making a submission.
