The removal of 80% of the market is incredibly disappointing and the a shock to the community. City planners should be ashamed for caring about profit and developers in rather than caring about the wellbeing of the community. As a medical student, soon to be graduated as a medical doctor, I am very aware of the interplay between the city planning on the health of a community. The access to fresh affordable produce the market provides is invaluable. The market provides a vibrant multi-cultural community and supports local businesses. Melbourne is one of the most liveable cities, and it is places like Preston market that make this true. Do not allow this to occur, the community deserves better than for such a regrettable decision to be made.
