HI Planning Authority, Just a quick point. The Preston Market is a peoples market and probably the last in Melbourne that hasn't been gentrified and become largely a tourist attraction. The shops there are varied and cheap and the serve the local communities which aren't exactly in the highest socio-economic brackets. I am concerned that any redevelopment of the site is going to result in increased rents for the traders and hence increased prices and a change in the number and variety of shops that are currently viable. If the current owner of the site need to make a greater return on the investment could they not build over the north eastern car park and leave the market and its tenants alone. Cheers
