As the planning for the Arden precinct is still a work in progress it should take into account the lessons learnt from COVID Pandemic as well as the potential impacts of climate change on Melbourne. Thus we need to design ventilation into our buildings and that many people will work from home for all or part of their working time. I believe that responding to these changes is best done passively rather than relying on active technology. This then has consequences for the design of the whole precinct - buildings with openable windows for ventilation, less building height. Different mix between commercial and residential buildings. Lots of greenery so that those working can have views of greenery wherever they are in the precinct as well as reducing the heat island effect.

I confirm that I have read and agree to the above conditions for making a submission.
