This cookie cutter development should be cancelled it is an affront. It is using the wrong cookie cutter. This Beverage site should be reserved for a new meso scale green city, not connected to the electricity grid, not connected to the gas grid, not connected to the sewer grid, not connected to the storm water grid and with only minimal connection to the potable water grid. There should be no bungalows, the city must be cut to a new pattern. There should be no petrol. There should be no diesel. At the centre of the development a meso scale community hub incorporating the worlds first fossil fuel free indoor super charging facility for 70 cars trucks and buses, on the Hume Highway (refer image attached). Public transport will be included, including a fast link to a new railway station to the west. And yes there should be wind turbines on the ridge to the east as part of and Economic Engine® Meso Economy development to the south of the proposed area, and perhaps it is time that the public had no say at all, because after COP26 the world is looking down on Australia and we are officially at the bottom socially. Only government can make real change. Can decide when enough is enough. When it is time to do the right thing.

RVS Industries would feel comfortable tendering this project on the Governments behalf to Hickory, GM Project Management, Hamilton Marino and CORE DC with whom we have major project development and construction leadership experience and prior connections. Once this meso scale green city is completed we would be very happy for the government to open up the field. There is nothing to loose, only reputation to gain.

J. R. Sarah, Managing Director
